

What's New? An insight from Leatherhead

In association with Leatherhead
Food Research

Prepared by: Mia Naprta, Market Analyst and Hazel Lee, Product Development Scientist

1. Raw Chocolate Pralines

The Moonbeam Food Company makes artisan raw chocolates from its small kitchen in Cambridge. These delicious handcrafted hazelnut pralines are made in small batches using only the finest quality ingredients. They come in boxes of four or eight, and are beautifully presented and finished with a hand-tied ribbon.

2. Raw Mylk Chocolate, Mandarin & Gubinge Bar

Handmade in Melbourne, Australia, Loving Earth has crafted this chocolate using raw Amazonian Criollo cacao and infused it with fragrant mandarin, a subtle hint of cardamom, and Gubinge, a vitamin C rich plum picked by the Nyul Nyul people in the pristine Kimberley wilderness of Western Australia.

3. Thin Salted Caramel Bar

The Salted Caramel bar from Green & Black's new Thin range combines its milk chocolate with crunchy caramel pieces with flakes of Anglesey sea salt. The increased surface area of the thinner pieces means that the chocolate melts more quickly in the mouth and allows the flavour of the chocolate to really stand out.

4. Chocolate with whey protein isolate

Chocolift is a lactose-free, no added sugar chocolate made with 38% pure cocoa, 8.2g whey protein isolate and 2g of coconut oil per 40g bar. It is marketed as a 'guilt free' chocolate alternative for chocolate lovers on sugar and lactose controlled diets.

5. Organic raw chocolate with wild cranberries

This raw, handmade chocolate bar is made with organic cranberries (16%) and sweetened with Rice Syrup. It contains 60% cacao solids, and is free from gluten, dairy and soya – with low GI and GL indices.

6. 71% Filipinas organic dark chocolate

Blanxart continues to expand its single origin chocolate bars range, made from organic and fair trade sourced beans and packaged in simple, yet very stylish, brown paper. Use of the Philippine beans is quite rare in the industry – these come from the San Isidoro project in Davao Region of The Philippines.

See more new products from Leatherhead next month. ■